

It is 9:00 pm and the young child of four years has just been set down for a restful night sleep. The child's Mom and Dad have just begun to relax from a stressful day. Suddenly, the phone begins to ring every half hour waking the young child and the parents are extremely furious. Who is it?, a telemarketer. They have been asked to stop calling, however they continue.

A young child, Mom and Dad sit down at the family dinner table to begin eating dinner. When suddenly the phone rings interrupting the only family time available during the week. Who is it?, a telemarketer. They have been told to stop calling, however, they continue to interrupt quality family time.

What is a person with a phone supposed to do? No one from the home has asked to be solicited via phone. How does a phone owner stop unwanted solicitations? Caller ID does not work and many of the other phone company features still allow unwanted telemarketers the opportunity to annoy phone owners. By allowing phone owners to be placed on a strict "Do Not Call" list as is available in New Jersey, phone owners are able to thwart telemarketers schemes. Do not allow family quality time to be interrupted by unwanted phone calls.
